THIRTEEN RAIDERS INJURED

POLICE GUARD SALT PANS FROM RIOTERS AND MANY ARRESTED

LONDON, May 19.—Thirteen persons were injured in a new attempt to raid the Wadalia salt pans in Bombay according to a Central News dispatch received here.

Police were forced to charge into a crowd of raiders after the latter began to hurl stones.

An earlier Exchange Telegraph dispatch said that seventy-two Indian Nationalist volunteers had been arrested when they began the attempted raid. About 150 volunteers converged on the salt depot from six different directions in an attempt to confuse the police guards and draw them away.

The salt raiders went on a hunger strike, another dispatch said, claiming that cement had been mixed with their food.

Eighteen ring leaders of the recent sanguinary Sholapur rioting were court-martialed and sentenced to rigorous imprisonment. Terms ranging from six months to seven years were imposed and heavy fines were meted out.

Four fifteen-year-old boys were sentenced to fifteen strokes with the birch and ten with the rattan cane.

BOMBAY, May 19.—More than 400 Indian Nationalist salt raiders were confined in a barbed-wire enclosure after they had attempted for four hours Sunday to carry out a raid on the government salt pans at Wadalia, a suburb of Bombay.

The enclosure was hastily constructed.

THREE KILLED BY GANGSTERS

Victims Claimed In Brooklyn Streets

NEW YORK, May 19.—Gangster guns left three dead in Brooklyn streets today. Police were puzzled as to whether there was any connection between the slayings.

The first murder was at Unionville, where authorities said Joseph Volenti, 26, with a police record, was stood up in a vacant lot and riddled with bullets.

The second was a double slaying near the Penny Bridge, where two young men were found face down on the sidewalk, their backs riddled with bullets. Neither has been identified.

Volenti was dressed in deep mourning and police said he may have been on his way to or from a funeral or ordered to dress in mourning by his executioners.

BOSTON POLICE IN BIG DRY CLEAN-UP

BOSTON, May 19.—Boston was "dry as the Sahara Desert" today. Swinging into the greatest liquor and vice drive since the advent of prohibition, police squads during the week end, raided forty-four speakeasies and a score of questionable resorts.

As a result, the police, who were under orders of the new police commissioner, Eugene C. Hultman, had twenty-three persons up for arraignment.

The "clean up" of Boston follows "revelations" in the inquiry into the pensioning of Oliver B. Garrett, former so-called "car" of the headquarters vice and "dry" squad and the forced retirement of former Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson.

Attorney General Joseph E. Warner found that Garrett's pension was obtained by fraud and Garrett awaits court arraignment on a grand jury indictment charging larceny.

NATIVE OF XENIA HONORED

Son Of Dr. J. Knox Montgomery, Born Here, To Be Youngest College President

A NATIVE of Xenia is being acclaimed as "America's youngest college president," an honor which came to him on the day preceding his thirtieth birthday.

This unusual distinction was attained by the Rev. Robert N. Montgomery, D. D., Pittsburgh, Pa., Sunday, through acceptance of the presidency of Tarkio College, Tarkio, Mo. He succeeds the Rev. J. A. Thompson, D. D., LL. D., who became president emeritus of the college after being the school's president for the last forty-three years.

Dr. Montgomery, who is a graduate of Muskingum College and of the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, was born in Xenia May 19, 1900 and upon his graduation from Muskingum became associated with Y. M. C. A. work in Oberlin, O., in a secretarial capacity. It was while engaged in Y. M. C. A. work that he met his future wife, the former Miss Ruth Kelley, an Oberlin College graduate and they were married in the fall of 1925.

Dr. Montgomery entered the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary in 1922 and in 1923 was graduated with highest honors, a distinction which won for him a scholarship at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland.

When he was elected to the chair of Hebrew and Old Testament Literature at the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, Dr. Montgomery, at the age of 27, became the youngest theological professor in the United States.

He is the son of the Rev. John Knox Montgomery, D. D., LL. D., president of Muskingum College, New Concord, O., since 1904. The previous youngest college president was Robert M. Hutchins, who was elected president of the University of Chicago a year ago at the age of 30.

Dr. Montgomery received his bachelor of arts degree at Muskingum and the bachelor and master of theology degrees at the Pittsburgh Seminary.

At present he is working toward the Ph. D. degree in the University of Edinburgh. In 1929 he was given the degree of Doctor of Divinity at Monmouth College, Monmouth, Ill.

Suspicious Senators
Train Telescope On Election

PHILADELPHIA, May 19.—A long distance telescope, set up in Washington and manned by the same suspicious senators who six months ago barred William S. Vare because he spent too much money, was trained on Pennsylvania today as millions of its voters prepared to go to the polls tomorrow to decide the maddest primary campaign in the state's history.

Irrespective of who wins the senatorial nomination, "Uncle Joe" Grundy, the high priest of high tariff, Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, the candidate of the Vare machine; or Francis H. Bohlen, the thoroughly wet law professor at the University of Pennsylvania, there is likely to be a tremendous fuss about it.

Money has flowed in this Pennsylvania campaign of yore. All the senatorial candidates, as well as the aspirants for governor, Gifford Pinchot, Francis Shunk Brown, and Ex-congressman Thos. W. Phillips, are wealthy men. All are backed by organizations of wealthy men. And the political dictatorship of wealthy Pennsylvania is at stake in tomorrow's test.

Senator Gerald P. Nye, (R) of North Dakota, chairman of the senate campaign funds investigating committee, already has put Pennsylvania on notice.

He has made a personal trip of inspection; he has sent a warning telegram to district attorneys; he has suggested the impounding of ballot boxes to prevent fraud; and he has urged the use of the state's power to prevent fraud; and he has urged the use of the state's power to prevent fraud.

All of which hasn't helped the confidence or the sense of well being on the part of any of the candidates concerning tomorrow. The gubernatorial candidates, of course, are immune from the senate's censure or authority. With the senatorial candidates it is another matter. And all of the latter are, directly or indirectly, linked up with the gubernatorial aspirants.

Davis and Brown comprise the Vare slate; Phillips and Bohlen compose the anti-prohibition ticket; and Grundy and Pinchot, while not formally allied as the forces, have nevertheless been forced into the same political bed through the natural circumstances, and their joint hatred of what they term "the Philadelphia gang" and the activities of General W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who is supporting Davis and Brown.

The eve of the balloting finds all candidates loudly proclaiming victory and secretly wondering just what is going to happen tomorrow when some two million Pennsylvanians trek to the polls. The strength of the wet ticket of Phillips and Bohlen is a gigantic problem in all calculations. Pennsylvania is considered a wet state. It gave Al Smith more than a million votes two years ago, and it

MARION, O., May 19.—A bullet from a gun of a police officer today had violently brought death to a 29-year-old paroled convict from the Ohio State Penitentiary, who allegedly was caught in the act of robbing a jewelry store here early yesterday.

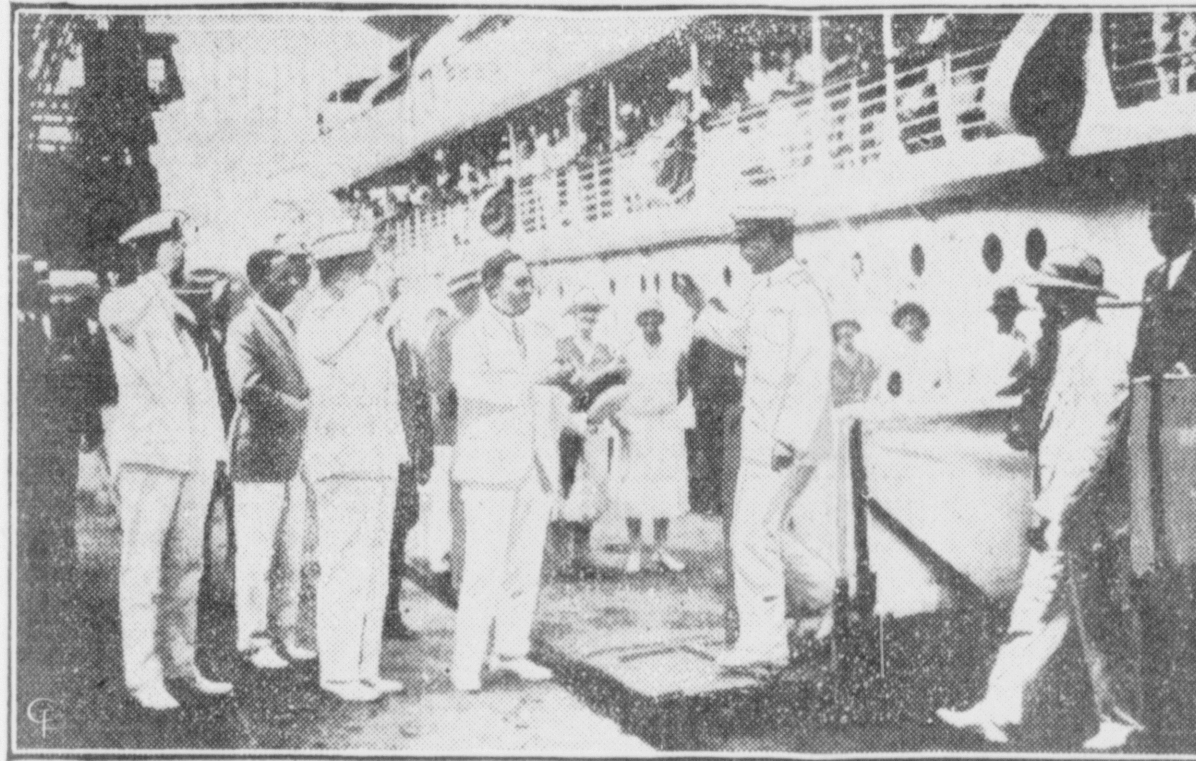

The paroled convict, William B. Harris, of Fostoria, Ohio, was shot in the back of the head by a police officer as he fled from the scene of the would-be robbery. He died six hours later in a hospital.

According to police, Harris had thrown a stone through the window of the May Jewelry Store, and had removed twenty-nine rings and two watches when the officer appeared.

Refusing to heed the policeman's demands to halt, Harris fled and the officer gave chase. Harris was shot down before he had run a block.

Harris was on parole from the Ohio State Penitentiary, where he had been serving a burglary sentence, which was imposed by the

EXPECT IMPORTANT DECISIONS IN LAST THREE COURT DAYS

Jones Law Test Case Is Before Supreme Tribunal Now

WASHINGTON, May 19.—With some of the most important prohibition cases since adoption of the eighteenth amendment before it, the Supreme Court convened today for the first of three decision days which will close the year's term of court.

Having already handed down the opinion, which attracted nationwide attention, the high court's opinion in the other cases before it will go far toward final clarification of the amendment and national prohibition act.

Outstanding among the cases are two involving the question of whether buying liquor is made a crime by the Volstead act, a decision which is expected to be followed by demands in congress for legislation.

The cases before the court include: Petition of Frank Ross of Elm Grove, O., for review to test constitutionality of the Jones "five and ten law" under which first offenders may be sent to prison for five years and fined $10,000.

Richbourg Motor case, involving the question of whether the government can prosecute under the national prohibition act and seize confiscated automobiles under the revenue laws, a case in which automobile finance companies are vitally interested.

The Galeno chemical case in which the government seeks to overturn lower court decisions holding that permits for withdrawal of industrial alcohol cannot be revoked by treasury regulation for law violation.

Government appeal in the case of Alfred Norris, New York banker, convicted for conspiracy to violate the dry act by ordering liquor by telephone, and that of James E. Farrar of Boston, in which the government contends that simply buying of liquor is a crime.

The high court has repeatedly pointed out that the eighteenth amendment and Volstead act shall be construed liberally to prohibit the commercialized traffic in liquor. The recent decision upholding seizure of bottles and kegs was made on this ground.

Will Review Fleet Tues-

First Time

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Back at his desk after another week end of fishing on the banks of the Rapidan in Virginia's Shenandoah National Park, President Hoover today was preparing to leave the capital late tonight for Norfolk, Va., to review the United States fleet off the Virginia Capes tomorrow.

The presidential party will go to Norfolk by special train and board the president's barge at Old Point Comfort for the new 10,000 ton light cruiser Salt Lake City early tomorrow. The return trip will be made by special train tomorrow night.

It will be Mr. Hoover's first review of the dreadnoughts since entering the White House. Fresh from the spring maneuvers in Caribbean waters, the fleet under command of Admiral William V. Pratt, left New York early today.

After the last ship passes review, the battleship division will deploy and prepare for an attack by the light cruiser squadrons and aircraft from the two giant aircraft carriers, the Lexington and Saratoga.

The president will be given a demonstration of the speed and utility of the 6-inch gun cruisers, the bone of contention between two groups of naval authorities.

The navy's new 10,000 ton eight inch gun cruisers are just commencing to be placed into commission, the Salt Lake being the only one actually at sea.

Rainstorm Blamed For Fact Driver Did Not See Truck

CANTON, O., May 19.—Two persons are dead today and twenty others are injured, five of them seriously, as the result of an accident yesterday near Uniontown when a southbound Detroit-Pittsburgh bus ploughed into the rear end of a heavily loaded truck trailer which was parked along the roadside for repairs.

The dead are Jacob Hubbard, 33, of Alliance, O., and Mrs. W. M. Emery, 39, of Bellevue, Pa. Mrs. Emery's husband is one of those critically injured.

Others whose conditions were reported to be serious today are: Mrs. Della Welch, 29, of Auburn, Vt.; Edward Brasher, 29, of Pittsburgh; the bus driver, John Janelli, 30, of Detroit; and Babel Dim, 31, of Detroit.

The crash occurred on the Canton-Akron road ten miles north of here during a heavy rainstorm. A preliminary investigation by county authorities revealed that the truck and trailer had been parked along the roadside only temporarily. Four tail lights were burning on the trailer, authorities said.

Officials have been unable to determine the exact cause of the crash due to the critical condition of the bus driver. Passengers in the bus told authorities that they did not see the parked truck and trailer.

The impact of the crash tore the top from the front of the bus and shoved the front seats to the rear. Several passengers were hurled through the windows. All the injured were taken to Akron and Canton hospitals by passing motorists and ambulances.

Those under treatment at the Akron City Hospital include: Louis Psenka, 51, of Louisville, O.; Iva Bucher, 20, of Toledo; John Bracko, 23, and his brother, Paul, 20, both of Powhatan Point; Henry Santrock, 37, of Akron; Milano Marti, 19, of Little Falls, W. Va.; Frank Murphy, 57, of Boston; Geraldine Rogers, 20, of Akron; John Yukas, 25, of Akron; and Augustine Suerssen, 51, of Detroit.

Those under treatment at Mercy Hospital in Canton are: Frank Detwiler, 23, of Mather, Pa.; his wife and their 15-month-old daughter, Betty Jane; Mrs. Catherine Rogers, 23, of Holiday Grove, W. Va.; and Moses B. Shipp, 45, of Canton.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., May 19.—With nineteen persons killed and more than 100 injured by tornadoes which lashed eastern Arkansas and northern Texas, a wide area in the Red River Valley region today fought rapidly-rising flood waters which have driven hundreds from their homes.

The tornado struck first yesterday in Ellis County, Tex., killing three persons. From there it skipped to Phillips County, Ark., where sixteen persons, most of them negroes, were killed outright.

Twelve of the fatalities occurred on the Lambrook plantation, the buildings of which were demolished in the storm. At Somerville, Tenn., fifteen buildings were crushed and seven persons were injured by the gale.

Arkansas National Guardsmen last night and today fought the inundated Red River region in small boats, removing stranded groups of homeless to safe ground. Militia officers described the flood situation as grave throughout the oil field region.

An estimated ten-inch rainfall has forced the Red River and several tributaries to break their banks. The Quachita River has reached a twenty-five-foot flood stage early today, according to relief workers. Two towns, Griffin and Louann, are completely under water.

Warnings of the flood danger were sent throughout the flood zone to nearly 2,500 persons, most of whom have sought shelter in buildings on higher ground.

In the region about Elaine, Ark., where the tornado did vast damage, eighty persons were injured in the storm and were treated at nearby hospitals and relief stations.

Relief is being rushed by the Red Cross from St. Louis and from Eldorado, Ark.

The storm that wrecked the business districts of Somerville, Tenn., struck yesterday when many villagers were at church. Although surrounding buildings were practically demolished the church building was virtually undamaged.

STEPS OF PEN CHAPEL FIRED

Believe Blaze May Be Accidental

COLUMBUS, O., May 19.—Authorities today speculated as to whether the fire had entirely stamped out the seed of mutiny and rioting among the Ohio State Penitentiary convicts as the result of the discovery of a small fire under the chapel steps within the walls last night.

Though Warden P. E. Thomas said he believed the fire started from a carelessly tossed cigarette stub, reports that convicts intentionally set fire to the steps persisted. The blaze was extinguished before it had caused any undue damage or alarm.

Following the great fire April 21, when 320 convicts perished, the rioting eight days later when two convicts were shot and seriously wounded, and the burning of the 87 stockade tents at a still later date, the incident caused the Ohio National Guardsmen to take extra precautions. Less than 200 soldiers are now stationed at the state prison.

SENATOR JOSEPH IS WINNER IN OREGON

Senator Charles L. McNary and Congressman Willis C. Hawley, both Republicans, were re-nominated.

CINCINNATI, O., May 19.—John Walton, who is said to have been the driver of the automobile which ran down and killed George Groneman aged 64, as the latter was returning from church, is being held on a charge of reckless driving by police today.

Authorities declared that a more serious charge would probably be filed by the dead man's relatives today.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

VICTORY—When this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory.—1 Cor. 15:54.

APPEAL IN VAIN

The cry of freedom cannot be raised in any corner of the world without falling upon some sympathetic ears in this country. "American friends of Mr. Gandhi" joined with a number of Indian organizations in New York last Sunday and, with the telegraphed blessing of the Universal Negro Improvement association, adopted a resolution urging the administration in Washington to recognize the belligerency of India's salt insurgents. The principal American speaker at the meeting was Judge Daniel F. Cohalan, a former member of the supreme court of New York. The Indians, Cohalan declared, should have the opportunity to resume control of their government in order that they may restore their prosperity and rebuild their industries "which have been wiped out by their foreign masters, who for nearly 200 years have bullied and controlled and robbed them!" The speaker then turned on the American press and accused it of being subservient to British propaganda.

All of which is bunk of the purest ray serene. Great Britain's record of nearly two centuries of orderly government in India speaks for itself. There is no need for other propaganda. Anyone who has read the story of British rule in India with an unbiased eye would be loath to see that rule now replaced by the chaos that inevitably would follow upon its withdrawal. The retirement of Great Britain from India at this juncture would be a calamity to the Indian peoples themselves and to the world at large.

Americans have a strong traditional sympathy for any people aspiring to govern itself; but they have had abundant proof nearer home than India that not every people that aspires to govern itself is competent to do so. When the numerous races in India have given more evidence of being able to govern themselves and live in peace with their neighbors will be time enough to talk about Great Britain's giving them the opportunity to do so. The proper place for any resolution urging American recognition of Indian belligerency at this time is the executive waste-basket.

MUSSOLINI SPEAKS

While disavowing all desire to precipitate adventures in other fields, Signor Mussolini warns the world that if it starts monkeying with Italy's frontiers it will get hit with a thunderbolt. That is fair enough. One shouldn't covet his neighbor's frontiers, any more than his ox or his ass or anything else that is his. Allowing some of Italy's neighbors to know what is in store for them won't do them any harm.

The duke was not talking wholly for foreign consumption. A crowd of 50,000 wildly-cheering Livornese listened to his speech, which was delivered on the anniversary of Leghorn's battle with the Austrians in 1849. The Italians are a temperamental and easily excited people. They like to have the chords of their patriotism played upon; and no one knows better than Signor Mussolini how to do this to their satisfaction. A great many of the utterances which he has made ostensibly for the world at large, we fancy, were intended primarily to tickle the pride of his fellow-countrymen. At first his vigorous language caused some uneasiness beyond Italy's borders; but the world now has the duke's number. As long as he puts adventures behind him and seeks only to hold what his country already has he is welcome to his thunderbolt. The world understands.

The Brooklyn Eagle thinks that the Kansas City judge who wallops juvenile delinquents with a hickory paddle may well be a breeder of anarchy. Then the gentleman who said "Spare the rod and spoil the child" was all wrong.

A good peasant, as the Soviet leaders see him, appears to be closely akin to a good Indian, as Americans formerly regarded him.

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

WHY WE DO IT

Most of us give ourselves more credit than we deserve. We accept responsibilities and meet obligations and perhaps hear somebody tell us we are quite noble. And we tell ourselves we are noble. The fact is, probably, that we are only taking the easiest way, doing the easiest thing. We accept the responsibility or meet the obligation because we do not wish to fuss about it or fight about it. Some people, thought to be high-minded and grand, are only weak.

RELIGIOUS TOLERANCE

There is really more talk about religious intolerance than there is intolerance. We imagine there is more than there is. The fact is that when people get together and talk frankly about their beliefs, their hopes and fears and purposes, they don't differ very much. There are always some who say they believe what they do not believe. Others believe what they claim not to believe. And as to creed, we all know we are attracted by personality and honesty and brains. Right down deep we do not care very much what church a man belongs to or whether he belongs to any.

OUT OF PROPORTION

Some people lack perspective when they make their wills. It's bad enough to lack perspective in life. It is even worse in death. For you can leave a will that is perfectly legal and yet perfectly absurd and out of proportion. A Philadelphia woman left a $10,000 trust fund to be used at least in part to take care of a parrot and a dog. She could have given the parrot to somebody who likes parrots and would have been happy to get it. She could have given the dog to a boy who would love a dog. And she could have done something worth doing for a number of human beings with the ten thousand.

BEING FRANK

Emily Blair, writing in "Good Housekeeping," tells mothers that instead of acting as literary censors and trying to keep their daughters from reading modern books that deal frankly with life and its problems, they will do well to read the books themselves, so they will know what their daughters are thinking.

Most of us make the mistake of not trying to find out what our sons and daughters are thinking about. We try to tell them what to read and not to read and what to do or not to do, and all the time we really do not know what they really want to do. To understand youth today is a problem—a problem that is mighty hard to solve. But there is nothing in life more worth working at than this very problem.

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

AMBITION

NEW YORK CITY, New York—Ever hear of the "Booth myth"? It is the idea that John Wilkes Booth, assassin of President Lincoln, did not meet death at the hands of "Boston" Corbett in a Virginia corncrib but escaped to Texas and lived there until early in the 1900's under the aliases of "John St. Helen" and "David E. George."

One of the chief exponents of this theory is Dr. Clarence True Wilson, with whom it is a hobby. Dr. Wilson once acted as an agent for the sale of the mummy of "Mr. St. Helen," of Texas, to a side show where it is today exhibited as the body of John Wilkes Booth.

Dr. Wilson's ambition in life, it is said, after he has buried King of the alleged Booth mummy and rescued it from public exhibition.

SANITARY PRETZELS

I have heard of "pretzel benders" and "pretzel varnishers" but now comes the "pretzel wrapper." The Health Department has issued a weighty ukase against bowls of pretzels sitting around so everyone's fingers could dive into them. So hereafter the side kick of the old glass of foamy lager must wear a wrapper.

Putting envelopes on pretzels may yet become quite a business, but old-timers are outraged over turning big, juicy, glossy pretzels into sanitary mollycoddies.

JUST A MEMORY

TARIFF FIGHT NOW ENDING IN CONGRESS VITALITY AFFECTS EVERY U. S. CITIZEN; SENATE CONSIDERS NAVAL TREATY NEXT

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—How the tariff fight ends, between now and congress adjournment, will make a great deal more difference to the average American than the outcome of the senate's argument over the agreement reached at the recent naval conference in London.

The cost of living, jobs and considerations depend on tariff rates. Issues of future peace or war, in the course of the next 50 or 75 years, may depend on the answer to the naval question that is to say, they might, if (in strict confidence) the whole controversy were not 99 per cent bunk.

However, the effects of whatever is done in connection with the naval matter will not begin to be felt inside of three or four weeks, as the effects of the final settlement of the long-drawn-out struggle over the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill will.

For all that, as a cross-word puzzle, the naval bargain framed up at the London conference in the last three months does have its points of interest.

It will be worth watching, to see how it works itself out.

Presumably it does not mean much of anything.

As soon as it became apparent, as the London negotiations progressed, that nothing could possibly be accomplished in the direction of naval reduction, the American and English delegations got busy to contrive a treaty that would look like something genuine, to submit their respective public for political purposes.

The American public, in particular, positively had to be provided for.

Inexhaustibly glib as it appears to be, it evidently actually was expecting a real chicken to hatch out of a china egg, and obviously, if the incubator failed to perform, was due to be badly disappointed—with probable political "repercussions," as the diplomats say.

In this instance it happened, too that the American representatives were dealing, in Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, with an undoubtedly sincere Briton—impractically pacifistic perhaps, but indisputably well intentioned. As to his admiralty, maybe there was room for discussion, but Ramsay himself unquestionably was all wool and a yard wide throughout.

Besides, he also had political "repercussions" to reckon with.

The Japanese, French and Italian negotiations seemingly were less worried concerning their home publics and their "repercussions"—their public being more manageable mayhap, or more blasé and less hopelessly expectant.

Anyway, it is plain that the Japanese, French and Italian representatives arrived in London on the Lookout, not so much for a treaty, to take home and brag about, as for whatever advantages they might be able to pick up, in the course of the discussions, for their three nationalities.

The Japanese very clearly got what they were running for—the support, with some few limitations tacked onto the American and British sea establishments. Being satisfied thus, they naturally were extremely well disposed to join Prime Minister MacDonald, Secretary Stimson et al in fixing up a treaty, that would appear to be the best advantage to ordinary non-naval folk in England and the United States.

The French and Italians were not so enthusiastic, but at least created no unnecessary row. What was the use?

Under the circumstances the only practicable sort of pact was one so artistically jumbled that it stumps the veriest expert to explain just what it does mean.

The process of jumbling is not as difficult as it looks.

Types of ships and armaments are so various that, by averaging them up, re-dividing them, contrasting one combination against another and shuffling them repeatedly around, even a rear admiral finds it hard to tell whether he is putting to sea with a squadron of battle craft or homeward bound in command of a destroyer flotilla.

This was done capab'ly enough

Peter's Adventures
By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent

AS GREEN-COAT SNOOZES

Peter was sure Great Water-Beetle was boasting.

"Why should Mr. Frog pick on a little fellow like you? And even should you catch his interest, what could you possibly do to protect yourself from a giant like himself?"

"I'd frighten him half to pieces!" shrilled Great Water-Beetle.

"I don't believe it!" declared Peter, flatly, then added, "How?"

"By leaping out and then dropping into the water with a great splash!" So! The Beetle illustrated his story, then popped out his head to blink up at Peter on the bank. "Old Green Coat snoozes in the sun, on a stone, maybe, his big eyes staring out over the waters. But big as Green Coat is, he's sort of stupid, and never thinks to look up at the sky once in a while to see if anything is coming from that direction. So I sneak up on him and he never sees me until I fall—ker boom—right in front of his nose and startle him so he tumbles from the stone into the water. Its heaps of fun to joggle him off his comfortable perch, let me tell you!"

"It must be," laughed Peter. But say, Beetle, how in the world do you get into the air to fall down into the water? I supposed you were a water creature."

"So I am, but I am an accomplished flier," Beetle puffed out his chest and took a deep breath. The boy could see Great Water-Beetle was rather fond of Great Water-Beetle. "You are a land creature, boy, and yet you say you can swim in the water. Well, I am a child of the pool, and yet I can fly in the air a little. What's so strange about that? I fly every moonlight night. Then the pool is a patch of silver, the breeze is laden with the perfume of flowers. I fly on the sort of night when the crickets sing loud and the Katydid call, the night when all the tenants of the pool who can crawl, clamber up the stems of water plants for a whiff of fresh air and all of us who have them unfurl our gauzy wings and fly to the shore to listen to the midsummer night's concert."

Next: "Trouble in the Fall of the Moon."

at London so that it can be plausibly argued, at one and the same time, on the senate floor, that the United States is building up its fleet at a cost of $100,000,000 a year and that we shall save a billion in the next decade.

In fact, it is being done—with varying figures, of course.

Naturally the civilian delegates who attended the conference had no notion what it all was about.

The American and British experts managed it between them (the Japanese merely looking on and occasionally chipping in in their own interest), and it goes without saying that each group did its utmost to get the better of the other. Only time can tell which was most successful. It was a couple of years before Uncle Sam realized how neatly he had been hornsawed at the earlier Washington conference.

MENU HINT

Boiled Potatoes with Meat Gravy
Asparagus
Gingerale Vegetable Salad
Caramel Custard
Cool desserts are much appreciated on hot nights. So many dainty custards may be made with eggs and milk, and they are not only appetizing and give just the right finish to a meal, but they are healthful as well. Fresh strawberries may often be served with such custards.

Today's Recipes
Ginger Ale Vegetable Salad—One pint ginger ale, one package lemon gelatin, one tablespoon vinegar, three pimientos chopped, one-half cup finely shaved cabbage, one cup finely chopped celery, one-half cup cucumber pickles chopped. Heat the ginger ale to boiling. Pour over the gelatin and stir until thoroughly dissolved. Add rest of ginger ale, vinegar and salt. Chill. Combine the vegetables. When the gelatin begins to thicken add the vegetables and turn into wet molds. Chill.

Caramel Custard—Two-thirds cup sugar, one-half cup water, four tablespoons flour, two egg yolks, two cups milk, two tablespoons butter, one teaspoon vanilla, two egg whites, stiffly beaten, three tablespoons confectioner's sugar. Place sugar in frying pan, heat slowly and stir constantly with wooden spoon until light brown (caramel) colored sirup forms. Add water and boil two minutes. Beat egg yolks and add sirup. Mix well and add sirup mixture to milk. Cook in double boiler until mixture thickens. Stir often. Add butter, vanilla, and pour into buttered baking dish. Beat egg whites until stiff, add confectioner's sugar and beat until creamy. Pile roughly on custard mixture. Bake 20 minutes in slow oven. Cool, chill and serve.

Fruit Juices
Fruit juices left from the canned fruits or sweet pickles may be combined and boiled down with a little brown sugar. This fruit syrup is extra good with waffles, pancakes or a cottage pudding.

Reduces Eighty Pounds

"DEAR DOCTOR: I noticed the little note at the end of the Petersizing pamphlet, so I am writing to tell you that I used to weigh 218 pounds and was very miserable. I had tried every diet, drug, and whatever I was told to do, but all my life I kept around 200, until I got your Diet and Health, with Key to the Calories, from the public library and began Petersizing.

"I'm now down to 138 and still trying hard to diet. I have the most wonderful feeling when I'm reducing; feel so light, confident and peppy; and then I'll backslide for a whole week and feel so stuffed and stupid. If I could only control myself! I invested several dollars in a bathroom scale, make my salad dressing with mineral oil, and do everything you suggest, for you are the only one who has ever helped me in any way. I am only 18 years old. I wonder that I have a stomach left after all the patent medicines, salts, freak diets and whatnots I've been through, and I know you are right when you say that food, and food only, is what makes fat. Thank you so much for what you've done for me.

MISS M."

Eighty pounds is a very great excess, and you are certainly wise to have reduced, Miss M. Remember, however, that in youth it is considered wiser to be slightly over the average weight, for the resistance is higher. The reverse is true after 30, those under the average weight showing better health and better life expectancy. The average weights as given in tables compiled by the insurance companies, after 30 years, are too high because there are so many more overweight than among the insured after 30, than there are normal and underweight.

Don't worry about the occasional week of backsliding, so long as you lose the excess you gained, immediately.

Sooner or later everyone will know that it is food, and food only, that causes fat. It means food in excess of the body needs. Of course, there are many who apparently eat very lightly, who get fat, but they're not exceptions to the rule. It simply means that they are inactive physically or very short, so they don't need much food, and even on a moderate diet they get more than they need. So they have to either decrease their food or increase their physical activities. The same rule applies to those who have ductless gland disturbances. There is no doubt that certain disturbances of these glands can cause one to gain weight more easily, because the fires of the body do not burn up so quickly and the food needs are lessened. This fact must be taken into consideration and less food taken.

I'm glad you stopped patent medicine for reducing, for certainly would have ruined your health sooner or later, and perhaps would have brought on a goiter. Has happened!

Thank you very much, Miss M., for letting us know your glad results.

The instructions contained in my book on reducing we have in condensed form in the Petersizing pamphlet, which can be secured by following column rules.

MRS. J.: Our pamphlet on the Hygiene of Women gives instructions on how to treat that slight discharge you speak of. See column rules.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Peters cannot diagnose nor give personal advice. Your questions, if of general interest, will be answered in the column in their turn. Requests for articles or pamphlets on hand must be accompanied by a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope, with the following:—mail charge to help cover cost of printing and handling; for each article wanted, two cents in coin; for each pamphlet ten cents in coin. Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Dear Virginia Lee: I'm a married woman. Have been married 12 years and have two children. I am 28 years old, my husband is 33.

My life has been very happy until the last four or five years. My husband is jealous of me and accuses me of being with other men. Last spring I met a man and my husband accuses me of caring for him. I didn't at the time, but I got where I really love this man.

"He's a married man with a wife and five children. His wife is a sweet woman and is good to him, also to me. I'm good to her and tell him not to mistreat her. I have told him I wouldn't have him leave her, for I don't want to break their home up.

"Now my husband hasn't any work and I want to get a job and he doesn't want me to. Please answer at once and tell me what you think of this letter and if you think it all right for me to love this man VIOLET."

Your letter is all right, Violet, but you know I would not think it all right for you, a married woman, to love a man who is not your husband. It is wronging both your husband and the man's wife and little children.

A husband who is so much older than his wife is quite apt to be jealous of her. You would have to be extra careful that he has no cause for his jealousy. You must consider your children, too. You don't want their mother to have a bad name, do you? Other children would hear about you and this man—for people will talk.

—and they would say nasty things to your children and make them feel bad.

You will be much happier, believe me, by crushing down your liking for this other man and being absolutely true to your family in word and deed.

And don't go to work outside your home if you can help it. The children need you there and your husband will, I hope, soon find work.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I read your letters in the paper and will say I enjoy them very much, but a letter in today's paper rather touched me when you answered a boy that wanted to get acquainted with young people that he would not meet the best girls at public dances.

"Now, I do not agree with you there. I go to hall dances that are run nice and decent, also have some good friends, and I know we are good girls and I want to ask that young man's address. I would like to write to him, as he is a stranger in a strange city. BLUE EYES."

Thank you for correcting me about the dances, Blue Eyes. I should have investigated the matter before answering, shouldn't I? Then I should have told the young man to go to dance halls to meet girls, but be careful that they are properly run and chaperoned places where nice girls like you and your friends go. Maybe he'll see this correction.

I haven't his address, dear. Sorry.

How To Achieve Beauty

By GLAYS GLAD

The recent death of the beautiful Allyn King, generally attributed to a heart ailment, has called to women's attention again the dangers that lie in too rapid reduction.

Many deaths due to ignorance lie in various methods of reducing occur annually. The American Medical Association not long ago appointed special committees to work wholly on the problems of reduction, because of the alarming mortality that the mania for the slim silhouette has brought about.

There are certain cautions that every woman should pay heed to, one of the most important being the admonition against taking drugs for reducing purposes. They spell DANGER!

Second, perhaps, in importance is the warning not to take large quantities of laxatives. Your diet should contain the foodstuffs that give normal bowel movements.

A third precaution is not to take Turkish baths too frequently. They are too much of a strain on the heart.

Don't go on every freak diet that someone tells you about.

Don't try to lose 30 or 40 pounds in a month, unless you want to lose your health!

The best diets and exercises courses may give you a loss of eight or ten pounds in the first two weeks. But do not expect that to continue. If it does, your strength may go with your poundage. Be content to lose, at the most, two pounds a week, after the first two weeks.

After you have lost 25 or 30 pounds, relax a little from the strict dieting. If you use judgment and common sense, you will never again be obliged to go back to the strenuous first day's dieting that is the basis of all reliable reduction courses.

Don't expect that you can diet and not exercise or that you can neglect the principles of all good living and live to tell the tale!

The American Legion has always had in mind the children in its programs of community service and civic betterment.

Through efforts of Joseph P. Poody Post, No. 95, local Legion unit, Xenia boys for the first time have an opportunity for sectional, and it is hoped, state and national honors, in the annual nationwide junior baseball program sponsored by the World War veterans' organization.

Xenia's junior baseball team composed of boys under 17 years of age is practicing diligently and is awaiting information on when the tournament for this district will be staged.

Winners of the national title this year will be rewarded with a trip to the World's Series in the fall with all expenses paid.

Memphis, Tenn., has been chosen as the scene of the "world's series" of the Legion's junior baseball program next fall.

This year, as in the past, the American Legion National League of organized baseball, are sponsoring the program to the extent of $50,000, and the gate receipts for the regional, sectional and world tournaments help pay the expenses of transporting and caring for the boys whose teams climb higher than the state championship status.

Chicago was the scene of the first Legion junior baseball world's series in 1926. Owing to the convention held in Paris, France, in 1927, no world series was held that year. The 1928 contest was staged in Washington, and last year it was held in Louisville.

The number of boys participating in the junior baseball competition this year is more than half a million, an increase of more than 200,000 over last year. Graham McNamee, the noted sports announcer, will broadcast the world's series again this year in a national hookup of the National Broadcasting Co., as he did a year ago in Louisville.

The set-up for elimination games throughout the nation is now under way with June 15 scheduled as the final day for registration. Rules and regulations have been in the hands of directors of these elimination tournaments several weeks.

The final winners at Memphis will be awarded gold watches, and trips to the world series of the major leagues as guests of the big teams, traveling with them.

St. Paul's High School, of Champlain County, is the particular nemesis of Springfield Valley High School in athletics. Runnerup for the county basketball title, Springfield Valley upset advance calculations by defeating Dayton Oakwood in the first round, 8 to 3. Then along came St. Paul's and nosed out the Greene County entry in the second round, 2 to 1 in an eight-inning contest, giving the boys their first defeat of the season.

City champions in 1927 and 1929, the Downtown Country Club's softball team is having its troubles this season. Carroll-Binder Co. trounced the Downtowners three weeks ago and later the league was reorganized. Then the Lang Chevrolet Co., looking more like champions than the Downtowners, administered a beautiful lacing to the D. T. C. nine in the opening National League game last Friday. The boys had bought a lot of new dry bats before the game too but to no avail so there can be no alibi about dampish bats such as the Cincinnati Reds found in the bottom of their batting slump. Maybe, however, Langs had something to do about the ope-sided defeat. Probably they did as fifteen hits usually mean a few runs. It is probably safe to say that the outfit which wins the league title will do so over Langs' dead body.

GREENVILLE TAKES THIRD TRACK TITLE

Greenville High School, track champions of the Miami Valley League for the last two years, captured the title a third time by rolling up 46 1-5 points in the annual league track and field meet conducted Saturday at the fairgrounds at Greenville.

Scoring 37 7-10 points, Miami-burg nosed out Piquette for runnerup honors. The Piquette total was 35 1-2. Troy was fourth with 22 1-2 points and Sidney was fifth with 12 1-5 points. Xenia Central had an entry in one event but failed to get a point.

Records for the league meet fell in almost every event.

Derby Winner To Get Real Test At Belmont

WHITNEY STARS TO MAKE GALLANT FOX PROVE HIS ABILITY

Sande Took Classic Too Easily To Furnish Test

By DAVID J. WALSH

NEW YORK, May 19.—There is only one horse race that can determine what the Kentucky Derby on Saturday and previously the Preakness so signally failed to disclose, namely, whether Gallant Fox is a great three year old or merely the best of an indifferent brood.

The show down in question didn't arrive at any time during the running of either classic. It will come in the Belmont Stakes, several weeks hence, when which One and perhaps Boojum, the Whitney stars, will ask the Fox to run the race of a true champion or admit that the mantle of greatness is not rightfully his.

He may not necessarily have been a great colt Saturday but he certainly was no worse than a good one. Only a real horse can win the Kentucky Derby as easily as the Fox did and so today the only pressing question concerns itself with the quality of his goodness.

Horses run against him in the Preakness and Derby cannot hope to furnish the answer. This must come from a colt which has done enough winning in his own right to afford the inevitable basis of comparison by which the gauge of greatness is established.

If Gallant Fox beats which One in the Belmont, then automatically he must be awarded a place on the pedestal of ranking champions before which the gods of racing bend the knee.

Either the climax or the denouement of the Fox's career certainly he faced no horse as potentially good as which One on Saturday and it may even be that none of them was the equal of Boojum, although the latter had to be piffling and may not be able to beat a spanking good watering cart at the moment.

In the Preakness, for instance, he was something like eighth going to the half mile and then just ran over everybody and everything to win, galloping from Crack Brigade. The latter, among others, including Tannery and Alcibiades, did a lot of running in the first three eights but when the Fox started to run, they stopped, pronto, and never started again. If they remained for Gallant Knight, Ned O. and Gone Away to come on and do something about it because a horse race is positively no horse race at all unless somebody finishes second, third and fourth in the order named.

The Fox, in other words, never was questioned about his status once he got in front. There was no challenge in either race; not even an interrogation. Doubtless he could have answered, if the matter arose. But the point is that the matter didn't and the question was never asked. If which One is the horse he was in 1929, the question will be not asked, but demanded, at Belmont Park. Many, indeed, were convinced that destiny had selected this horse as the champion colt of 1930, after his successful season at Saratoga and his winning of the Futurity. Had he carried these victories to the downs at Louisville on Saturday, he would have been the favorite, not Gallant Fox, and possibly the winner. Who knows?

The best score recorded by members of the visiting team in the two-man event was 1,105, the combined three-game total of McCurdy and O'Connell, while in the singles Peterman's 544 led the list. Tourney scores:

GAME RAINED OUT

The scheduled baseball game between the Xenia Merchants and the Thompson Printing Co., nine, considered one of the foremost semi-pro teams in Dayton, was rained out Sunday afternoon at Washington Park, making the first postponement of the local season on account of adverse weather. A Sunday morning deluge made playing conditions impossible. Manager Jesse Chambliss hopes to book the Dayton outfit for a game here later in the season.

JAMESTOWN INDEPENDENTS WIN FROM DAYTON IN RAINY CONTEST

Playing on a muddy diamond and in a constant drizzle of rain, the Jamestown Independents defeated the Dayton Travelers by a score of 12 to 4 Sunday afternoon at Leach Park, Jamestown. Only eight innings were played because the rain assumed the proportions of a down-pour and playing conditions gradually became impossible.

The Independents hit two Dayton pitchers hard after the first two rounds. Jamestown held a lead of 5 to 1 at the end of the fourth round but Dayton nearly evened the score in the fifth, an inning in which the Travelers tallied three runs.

Bartels, first Dayton batter in the fifth, singled. L. Hackett was Geyers, Lang Chevrolet Co. and the Graham Paints are in a three-way tie for the leadership of the National Softball League at the end of the first week of play, while in the American League the Krippendorf-Dittman Shoes and Xenia Country Club Caddies are the co-leaders.

These five teams were victorious in the first games but will find the sledding hard to maintain their positions. It is just barely possible the same situation may exist at the end of the games scheduled for this week as none of the undefeated teams in either league are scheduled to meet each other.

This week's schedule follows:

Tuesday — Caddies vs. Kiwanis-Rotary; Wednesday — Carroll-Binder vs. Langs; Thursday — Company L vs. Krippendorf; Friday — Grahams vs. D. T. C. Club. League standings follow:

safe when Hollingsworth messed up his grounder, the only error committed by Jamestown all afternoon. Lanning doubled. Francis was retired on an easy roller but Tangeman singled. He made the throw out, however, failing on an attempt to steal second.

The Independents gathered fifteen hits, of which seven were for extra bases, and every member of the Jamestown nine personally scored at least one hit.

Evans, Jamestown pitcher, released only six hits and received good support in the field.

The Independents now have a record of three straight victories and will strive for their fourth win next Sunday when they meet the Springfield Avalons at Leach Park. The game will be called at 2:45 o'clock.

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, May 19.—Trading in the stock market was in extremely small volume today, for the fourth successive session. Efforts of the speculative leaders to stir up interest in their favorites brought meagre results and the market preferred to mark time.

Wall Street manifested considerable interest in the formal setting up of the new bank to supplant the mechanism of the Dawes plan for collecting German reparations. It also was expected that final details on the first issue of reparations bonds would be available in a day or two. Business and industrial reports were virtually unchanged, though in general promising a good recovery in trade before the end of the summer.

Stock trading in the first three hours was at the rate of about 2,000,000 shares. The bears made an early effort to unsettle the market by selling the industrial and utility stocks but the bulls were too strongly entrenched, and most of the lost ground was recovered.

In the afternoon, United States Steel at 170 3/4 showed a loss of 2 points; Westinghouse was down 2; General Electric, North American, American Can and Radio Keith down a point each. The rails made a better showing, Katy reaching a new high on the move at 60 and Erie up 1 1/2 at 50.

PSYCHOLOGY MEETING TO OPEN SCIENCE BUILDING AT ANTIOCH

Papers will be read by four Ohio State University professors at the annual two-day session of the Midwestern Psychological Association, which will formally install the psychology department in the new science building at Antioch College, Yellow Springs, next Friday and Saturday.

One of the most interesting papers of the conference entitled "The Results of a Two-Year Investigation of the Influence of Motion Pictures on Children's Sleep," will be read by Samuel Renshaw.

Other papers selected for reading at the conference include those by Willis Beasley, Alvah R. Lauer and Dorothy K. Postle. "The Religion of Adam and Eve" is the subject which will be discussed by Max F. Meyer, of the University of Missouri, president of the association. Meyer walked into the spotlight last year through his association with Prof. H. A. Graft in the issuance of a "sex" questionnaire which brought about de Graft's dismissal and Meyer's suspension from the university staff. Later, however, Meyer was reinstated. This talk will be delivered at the annual dinner on the closing day of the conference.

Psychologists from universities and colleges as far west as Kansas will gather at Antioch for this fifth annual meeting. One of the most significant papers of the conference is expected to be that on "Action Currents of the Brain," a study by E. B. Newman, of the University of Kansas.

Prof. Horace B. English, of Antioch College, secretary of the association, and Prof. M. L. Reymert, of Wittenberg College, are in charge of arrangements for the meeting.

The college's new science building, in which the conference will be held, is the gift of Charles F. Kettering, Dayton, a trustee of the college.

AUTOIST HURT WHEN MACHINES COLLIDE AT ROXANNA FRIDAY

Arthur Morgan, Mt. Holly, who suffered severe scalp wounds and a slight brain concussion when the auto in which he was riding figured in a collision on the Cincinnati Pike at an intersection with a road leading to Roxanna at 3:30 o'clock Friday afternoon, was removed to his home Sunday from McClellan Hospital, Xenia, where he had been taken after the accident.

Morgan was a passenger in a sedan owned and driven by John Pence and also occupied by John Rye, both of Roxanna. The crash occurred when the sedan attempted to cross the main highway and was struck by a Packard sedan driven by Mrs. J. H. Andrews, Akron, O., also occupied by Frank Webb, her chauffeur. Mrs. Andrews was driving west.

L. A. Davis, county road patrolman, who investigated the collision, said he was told that the Akron car was traveling at an average rate of speed and that the woman driver, thinking the other machine would continue across the intersection, attempted to pass it on the left. Pence, however, is said to have either applied the brakes or stalled his car when it reached a point near the middle of the road, the Packard smashing into it. Neither machine upset.

Morgan, the only occupant of either car who was injured, was stunned and sustained a deep glass cut on the back of the head. He was rushed to the Xenia hospital by Jack Burnett, Nashville, Tenn., a passing autoist.

XENIAN INJURED

has long been a problem to the enforcement authorities in Washington.

While no one concedes the wet slate much of a chance to win, the size of its vote tomorrow may well prove the determining factor as between the organization slate of Davis-Brown and the informal combination of Grundy and Pinchot. The wet votes will practically all come from the Davis-Brown combination, for Grundy and Pinchot are both declared dry. If this wet vote is large, it is probably going to be tough for Davis and Brown, who have taken no positive stand on prohibition.

The principal other unknown quantity in the battle is the real strength of the Vire machine. In other years there never has been much doubt about the organization, but this year there is. The far famed "boss" is broken in health and the organization affairs are now conducted by a agency or "war board" where they used to be settled by Vire himself.

For a week now the air has been filled with rumors of deals, and bargains, and ticket cutting in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. On two occasions, "Boss Bill" himself has issued personal appeals to his following in Philadelphia to stand firm and support the ticket without scratching. "A vote for Jim Davis and Frank Brown is a vote for me," he said. "A vote for them is a vote for my vindication." He referred to his being denied a seat in the senate— "stolen," he described.

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO DESERVED TO WIN

READ THIS FIRST:
Clara Dee Forester, the motherless, pampered, beautiful product of a modern boarding school life of idle extravagance, supplemented by extensive travel, scarcely knew her father, Matthew Forester, who had indulged with his immense wealth, not wisely, but too well, in his effort to provide her with the "best in life," since the death of her young mother, whom he had idolized. Forester goes to his lawyer, John Gregory, and makes a will leaving one dollar to Clara Dee Forester dies, and Gregory has just read the will to Clara Dee.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER II
"Prepare yourselves for the shock of your lives," she announced, mockingly.
"Tell us, Dee, we're dying to hear," they chorused.
"No reason why I should let you kill yourselves with curiosity—so—lend me your ears." My fond father left me exactly one dollar to squander lavishly upon this money-hungry world. They all gasped in unison, then shrieked with laughter.
"Don't tease, Dee. Tell us the truth, won't you?" demanded Bee.
"I am," Clara Dee assured them, firmly.
They sobered. Esther voiced their next thought.
"Did he lose his money before he died?"
"Oh, no, not at all—he had much more than I had ever expected. But he left it all to a number of institutions and charity funds."
"But why? How could he leave you nothing?" Phyllis insisted.
"Not 'nothing,' my dear," Clara Dee corrected her. "One dollar, I believe I told you."
"Don't be sarcastic," Phyllis advised. "But what are you going to do?"

Clara Dee shrugged. "Pack a bag and find a room. I think I have about enough to last a week—about what I usually spend for flowers to wear each evening. After that—" she waved her hand into space.
She wished so much that they would leave her, would cease their questions, each one of which pierced her sensitiveness like a hypodermic needle, and stung deeply. She didn't know how much longer her pretended indifference could last. Over anything else, she could weep before them and be assured of affectionate sympathy. But this, even though she, as yet, could not fully understand the situation, they were even more helpless than she.

Finally, each had taken her leave to dress for departure, each murmuring little words of sympathy and incredulous dismay. Clara Dee sat alone—feeling nothing, hot tears scalding her eyelids. She would not allow them to fall until the girls were safely gone from the house. Automatically, she rang for Marie and ordered cars to drive them home.

When they had gone, with their cool kisses left dutifully upon her cheek, and more murmured sympathy, Clara Dee did not at once resort to tears, as she had hoped she might. The reason for this was the thought that had arrested her attention, as the door closed gently upon their departure. Not one of them had mentioned returning to stay with her that night, though yesterday, all three of them had insisted emphatically that they would not allow her to remain in the house alone with her grief. Nor had one of them suggested that she come to her home for even one night. Well, perhaps none of them was to blame. Naturally, they would have to consult their parents about bringing a penniless girl into their homes.

They would quickly spread the news of her poverty, and by evening the story would be on the lips of everyone who knew her, would be the subject of the gossip at every well-known rendezvous of her friends. The odd smile twisted her lips. She rose and went into her bedroom, unconsciously gazing about the beauty of the room which was done in orchid and apple green with touches of gold, as if she had never seen it before. She probably never had consciously seen it, nor appreciated it, having taken it for granted as all the rest of the beauty and luxury and joy of her life. Now, though she had lost them all, they had suddenly become very precious to her. That is life. We only value and appreciate our most precious and beautiful possessions after years of living with them and looking at them, sometimes without actually seeing them, often losing and finding them; priceless bits of china, beautiful pictures, rare books, pieces of furniture restored to their former loveliness—hence the value of antiques. Even mothers become dearer to children after an enforced absence from the old home, which years have made all too familiar.

She crossed the room to her dressing table and touched gently the various pieces of valuable and exquisite toilet requisites. Of clear golden amber, set with amethysts to form her monogram. One time, twenty years ago, when Clara Dee lay on her mother's breast, that new light had shown in the mother's eyes as she gazed from the tiny black head, and pink face that was her new baby, about the small, scantily furnished bedroom of their flat, and then at the baby's father, who was bending over them in awed wonder. A spark of determination had kindled in her large grey eyes—like Clara Dee's now—although she was still very tired and weak.

She had said, "Matthew, we must surely succeed now. I'm counting on you to give our daughter what I've missed. I want her to have everything beautiful in the world—not imitations—but the real things which cost much money: diamonds, not brilliants, ivory, not celluloid—you'll see that she does, won't you, Matthew?"
"Of course, darling," he had answered, readily, "and so shall you have the beautiful things I am anxious to give you."
And he had—made such a spectacular rise in the financial world, that he had been able to provide them with every luxury, even before the death of Clara Dee's mother, when the child was only ten years old. Matthew Forester had mourned his wife's early death so obstinately that he had shut everything out of his life except his business and the rather impersonal training of his daughter, to whom he had vaguely understood his obligations as a father.

Her hand, on which sparkled diamonds which were not imitations, not brilliants, moved aimlessly. Then her eyes focused on a photograph of her father in his beautiful amber frame, and the tears which had been burning cruelly in her throat and eyes for so many hours, burst forth. She threw herself upon the deep, soft bed, among the heaps of delicate pillows, and sobbed unrestrainedly. Gradually the pain in her heart was eased and she lay silently for a long time. No doubt, Gregory had been correct when he had thought that if Forester could have understood this girl he would have treated her differently.

But at the time he had made his eccentric decision, his attorney and life-long friend had done his best to persuade him to alter his will, and failed.

"It's your money and your daughter," was Gregory's reply.

somewhere or other in the evening. She sleeps most of the day, and lives at night, smokes more than she eats, and I've noticed liquor on her breath. I'm going to do all I can with her this summer, but what can I do? Her eyes tell me frankly that I'm a back number, fit only to be relegated to the attic with the rest of the wornout and discarded clothes and articles. Oh, no—she's not insolent—perfectly mannered and courteous as a daughter should be. It's what she thinks and the way my advice glances from her as if she were an armor. Lord! I wonder what tools we 'successful' parents are, when we trust the training and character of our girls and boys to these fashionable schools, efficient enough insofar as any institution can be, but a poor substitute for the good old-fashioned training we received at the hands of our none so well-schooled parents. We pity the orphans who are deprived of a home life, and then allow our own children to substitute institutions for their homes. I sent her because I thought I was doing what her mother would wish me to do. I've given her, lavishly, everything that my money could buy. During these past weeks, I've wondered what she or any of her friends would do if they were put on their own resources, like thousands of girls in our offices and shops."

"But Matt," Gregory had reminded him, "they are trained for that sort of life."
"Trained nothing! Most of them are forced to leave the public schools in the grammar grades, to shift for themselves, to support their families. How much training is that? Hasn't Clara Dee had more than that already—at least she is supposed to have completed a proper school curriculum. I doubt if she could pass high school tests in any subject except dancing, riding and French. Our business girls, many of them, finish grammar school and work days at anything they can find while they attend night school to take a business course. That is the only way to be happy and enjoy luxury—to earn what we get. I know. That's the way I got mine."
"Do you think that all the girls who are thrust upon their own resources become successful women? Aren't there just as many in our stores and offices who indulge in the same harmful pleasures as do our own girls? Would you rather have Clara Dee in the same kind of company without the prestige of name and wealth?"

"Certainly not, rather, but if that is all my girl has in her, I can't see that it makes much difference where the end comes, if it's the same kind of an end!" he declared.
"But," a gleam of the Forester pride lighted his eyes. "I believe that my girl would measure up to my mark if she were given a chance. That is my fervent prayer. If I should be spared long enough to influence her myself, I'll change my will. If not, I want her protected for the future."
"I fear it will be a poor kind of protection, my friend, but it's your money and your daughter," was Gregory's reply.

BISHOP ALBERS TO CONFIRM CLASS AT ST. BRIGID CHURCH

The Rt. Rev. Joseph H. Albers, bishop of Luna and auxiliary bishop of Cincinnati, will administer the sacrament of confirmation to a class of 156 candidates from St. Brigid parish and the mission of St. Augustine Church at Jamestown and Waynesville at St. Brigid Church Monday evening.

The services will start at 7:45 o'clock and will mark the first official visit of Bishop Albers to St. Brigid Church. The Rt. Rev. John T. McNicholas, archbishop of Cincinnati, is at present abroad, and Bishop Albers is administering the sacrament here in his absence.

The confirmation class here is the first since five years ago last September when the late Archbishop Henry T. Moeller administered the sacrament, according to the Rev. Father David Powers, pastor of St. Brigid Church. One hundred and sixteen of the candidates for confirmation are from St. Brigid parish and the remaining forty are from Jamestown and Waynesville. About twelve members of the class are adults. The Rev. Father Lawrence Molman is pastor of the Jamestown and Waynesville Churches.

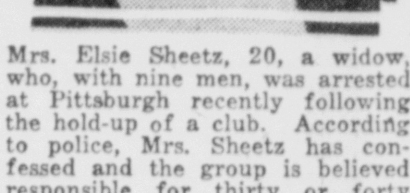

The services will begin with a sermon by Bishop Albers in which he is expected to explain the significance of the sacrament, after which he will catechize the class. Administration of the sacrament by the bishop will follow and the services will conclude with benediction with the Blessed Sacrament at which the bishop is expected to be the celebrant.

Confirmation, as its name implies, confirms the persons receiving the sacrament in the faith and marks the reception of the Holy Ghost. The bishop invokes the blessing of the Holy Ghost by the laying on hands and anoints the forehead of the recipient with chrism in the form of the cross. The ceremony reminds the candidate to be firm in his faith and to withstand temptation. It is one of the ancient rites of the church, being founded on Biblical authority and is the third sacrament received by the faithful Catholic in the natural order of life. Each candidate for confirmation is accompanied by a sponsor.

Fourteen priests from other parishes have accepted invitations to take part in the services here and will have places in the sanctuary.

The Theater

Want to know why Elinor Smith, the aviatrix, is grabbing so much publicity from the so-called hard-boiled editors? It's because she was once a showgirl and knows her way around in the publicity racket.

Your correspondent managed to pull the following information to retail to readers, if any: Elinor is the daughter of Tom Smith, vaudeville actor; her mother, once an actress is now a backstage mama; Elinor herself accepted a small part and a chance to understudy Dorothy Stone in "Criss Cross" several years ago and tramped four or five months. Now you have her background.

But all the performers aren't publicity hounds. Bebe Daniels, when she marries Ben Lyon on June 14, will not have any motion picture cameras concealed in the church to record the ceremony for the vulgar news-reel public.

Neither will there be a microphone within the church. The custom of introducing camera and celluloid into wedding ceremonies has been growing in Hollywood. At one wedding the camera peeped in the choir balcony and elicited a strange accompaniment to impressive vocal numbers. Bebe will have none of this. Her wedding will not be doffer for newsreels and any photographing will be done at the reception, or home or outside the church.

Mrs. Phyllis Daniels, Bebe's mother, is busily attending to the multiple details involved in a wedding. The other day she and Marie Mosquini went to Billy Radtgen's studio to see the final sketches for the bridesmaid's gowns. The bridesmaids will be Marion Davies, Lila Lee, Betty Compson, Adela Rogers St. John Hyland the writer, Constance Talmadge, Diana Pittman, Marie Mosquini and May Sunday with Mrs. Harry Martin (Louella O. Parsons) as matron of honor. The bride is being given many parties.

Ben Bernie and his orchestra will make their screen debut in an RKO war musical comedy "Present Arms" in which Ken Murray of vaudeville and Irene Dunne, an unknown, will be featured. Bernie is playing at the Montmartre but his contract does not forbid other engagements. For that reason he will lend a hand when Maurice Chevalier opens a week's personal engagement at the Mayan Theater. Chevalier is doing the footlights because of lack of a story at the studios. He turned down "Brewster's Millions" as not fitting his type and is considering "The Little Cafe," one-time stage play.

Mrs. Laura Rhinock Glustl is the wife of Roy D'Arcy, or rather was, until her recent divorce. This is the second time she has divorced Roy, who is a well-known screen villain and apparently carried his villainous ways into domestic life. The third time should be a charm. They were remarried after their first divorce some time ago.

Twenty Years '10- Ago -'30

Thousands of people have been in attendance daily this week at the Wright Bros. Aeroplane Station, near Fairfield, to see the trial flights of their aeroplanes.

A great many Xenia people were on the anxious seat last night when the earth was scheduled to pass through the comet's tail but nothing happened when the two bodies came together.

The motion picture machine booth at the O. S. and S. O. Home is about the safest, in the state, said J. H. Newman, chief assistant state fire marshal, who inspected it.

County Auditor W. L. Dean was in Cincinnati to attend a meeting of auditors, whose mission it is to appraise the property of the Little Miami R. R. and its branches.

Are We Being Strangled By Chains?

EVERY HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT is familiar with Virgil's story of the priest, Laocoon, who with his two sons was attacked by a swarm of serpents and crushed to death. The beautiful marble group, discovered in 1506, and now reposing in the Vatican Galleries has pictured graphically the struggles of the three humans with their reptilian assailants. Laocoon and his sons, even though they were equipped with mentality and super physical strength, were unable to cope with the writhing serpents which entwined themselves about the human bodies and crushed out their lives.

LAOCOON AND HIS SONS could have been saved had there been near at hand a group of his fellow citizens, who, with united effort, could have attacked the serpents and killed them before their deadly work was accomplished. But his friends were unaware of the situation. They were powerless to help because they had no knowledge of his plight. Laocoon lives today only in myth and marble—

BUT HIS STORY IS BEING RE-ENACTED with startling fidelity to the original. Everywhere in the United States the Independent Merchant, the Laocoon of 1930, is being enmeshed in the crushing embrace of the Chain Store System. Xenia is witnessing the spectacle, although it might not be aware of it. The Community Builders of this city are the saviors of the situation, but like Laocoon's friends they have not been aware of conditions until the present. Fortunately conditions have changed since Virgil's day and it is possible to sound the warning signal before it is too late. Unified co-operation by Xenia's consumers who are interested in the community, will preserve Home Owned industry for the city.

CHAIN STORE DOMINATION means the stifling of local enterprise. It means the cessation of local progressiveness. It means the disintegration of local community spirit. It means the draining of local resources. The Independent Merchants of Xenia are not alarmists. They are not attempting to cry "Wolf" when there is no danger. Their sponsorship of this educational campaign is devoid of selfish motive. Their interest is purely that of one who has invested in Home Enterprise and wishes to protect that investment.

THE FACTS SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES. Chain stores contribute nothing to the community wealth. They are here to make a profit—by no wild stretch of imagination can they be accused of being in business for their health. Their profits are substantial, fully as great, if not greater than those of the Independent Merchant. Their profits—every cent—are removed from this community and deposited in some far distant bank there to remain forever. Not one cent of Chain Store profit is reinvested in local enterprise. Chain Store operating expenses are removed as far as possible from the local scene. They won't buy here if they can buy elsewhere. There is no reciprocity in the Chain Store formula. Ask your banker how long chain store deposits remain in his vaults. Ask your local merchant how much Chain Store business comes his way. The facts tell the story perfectly.

LAOCOON AND HIS SONS could have been saved by united effort on the part of his friends. You as a citizen of Xenia and a builder of this community have it in your power to save Xenia business for Xenia. Don't let the Laocoon story be re-enacted with a Twentieth Century cast. Buy from your Home Town merchant.
